

Can you put a price on the reliability of your disaster recovery solution?

The expansion of Egton's successful Data Validation Service (DVS) means that more and more businesses across the UK can now take advantage of regular validations and the peace of mind this brings.

In the unfortunate event that your server is stolen, damaged through fire or flood, or suffers irreparable hardware failure - it is essential that your back up media can be read and that the hosted data can be reconstructed.

One-in-ten standard software backups prove to be faulty or unreadable when called upon for emergency data recovery.

DVS will regularly check and highlight whether your back up solution is working properly - helping to ensure data integrity and business continuity.

Up to 10 per cent of all backups are unusable

What is DVS?

Modern organisations rely heavily on the data held within their business. Egton's DVS verifies that your backup media can restore this critical data.

Wrongly configured scripts or faulty hardware could report that backups have been successful, leaving you in the dark of any potential problems. The best way to check that your data is intact and fully retrievable is to have your backup tapes validated regularly.

A team of IT experts will thoroughly test your backup media to ensure that all your data can be regenerated in the event of server damage, theft or hardware failure.

About Egton

In 2009, Egton processed 20,000 backup tapes for primary health care organisations. Egton holds the International Standard ISO/IEC 27001:2005 for information security management. This is awarded by the BSI group and covers the confidentiality, integrity and availability of information within both our software and business. Our commitment to information security provides you assurance that your data is safe with Egton.

Egton's DVS provides organisations with:

- A secure method of transportation is provided for each scheduled validation
- Data validation tests—which check that backup tapes are readable and correctly formatted.
- A validation report containing data from a 'dummy record' to ensure that practice data is valid
- A statistical report containing population data, based on analysis of your database
- A CD or DVD archive of clinical database along with the original validated backup tape.

With DVS you can be confident that your critical data is safely backed up and retrievable.
